Global Accessibility Awareness

The purpose of Global Accessibility Awareness Day (GAAD) is to get everyone talking, thinking and learning about digital access and inclusion, and the more than One Billion people with disabilities/impairments. From both a civil rights and a business perspective, people with disabilities are underserved by today's digital products. Digital accessibility refers to the ability of people with disabilities/impairments to independently consume and/or interact with digital (e.g., web, mobile) applications and content. It provides people with disabilities/impairments with the same access to web-based services, content, and other digital products as everyone else. This awareness and commitment to inclusion is the goal of Global Accessibility Awareness Day (GAAD), a global event that shines a light on digital access and inclusion for people with disabilities.

Common Disabilities/Impairments

Visual

People who are blind need alternative text descriptions for meaningful images and use the keyboard and not a mouse to interact with interactive elements.

Hearing

People who are deaf or hard of hearing will need captioning for video presentations and visual indicators in place of audio cues.

Motor

People with motor impairments may need alternative keyboards, eye control or some other adaptive hardware to help them type and navigate on their devices.

Cognitive

An uncluttered screen, consistent navigation and the use of plain language would be useful for people with different learning disabilities/impairments.
